

Have You Seen My Wife?

LENGTH, 650 FEET.

Having just been married the young couple is enjoying their wedding breakfast surrounded by their friends. The time comes for their departure.

The bride is entering the carriage but to her consternation the driver drives away not waiting for the groom. The groom then gets in another carriage. The two carriages are racing through the streets, the groom trying to overtake the bride.

Finally the groom gets out and starts on a run. In his unsuccessful effort to find his wife he is the victim of unkind fate, meeting fresh difficulties at every turn.

Husband and wife eventually land in the Police Station. The Sargeant, a very unsentimental person, thinking there must be insanity in the air, dismisses both as lunatics.

They finally come back home completely wrecked by the morning's occurrences and tearfully resolve to spend their honeymoon at home.

Bachelor's Wedding Bells.

LENGTH, 485 FEET.

PRICE, $53.35.

Mr. Barker, a confirmed bachelor, club man, all around good fellow, has an antipathy to the female sex. He likes them at arm's length—but no wedding bells for him."

Several married friends invite him to their homes, and after seeing the stormy side of matrimony he congratulates himself on a life of single blessedness. One evening at his club, some of the members and their wives concoct a plan to have some fun at his expense, they insert an "ad." in a paper for "A charming lady, object matrimony." giving Barker's address as the meeting place. The consequence is Barker finds himself besieged by ardent females who make his life a pandemonium for a few hours. One lady of more determination than the rest succeeds in capturing him. Barker confesses himself conquered and yields to his captor who smothers him with kisses.
